

Abstract

The present invention relates to an articulating aid for use in dentistry, which is characterised in that it has, on at least one side of a support layer, a plurality of differently coloured colour layers comprising colouring pigments and at least one adhesion promoter for at least one colouring pigment of at least one of the coloured colour layers